John Goes to Dublin IRL Making Pitstops in Philadelphia, Miami and Las Vegas

DUBLIN CALLING

John at Wawa... Then and Now

A Philadelphia Story

Twenty years ago, John worked with Wawa, an American chain of convenience stores and gas stations originating in the Philadelphia metropolitan area. He served as the face of Wawa in internal videos introducing the Sizzli, a now famous breakfast sandwich and a staple at Wawa.

Fast forward two decades, and

Last month, John received a call from Dublin, Ireland inviting him to perform at a private party. So he packed his bags as well as bags for Austin Powers, Ozzie Osbourne and Donald Trump and boarded a plane for a pre-Christmas fete honoring a lovely Irish couple celebrating 50 years together. And what a celebration it was.

It took place at Murray's, an iconic Irish pub mere blocks away from the Jameson Distillery and Guinness Storehouse. Steeped in a rich and storied history, today Murray's serves up an inspirational ambience of culture, character and heritage... perfect for a familial gathering and celebration.

And John brought his best to this intimate family party. In separate moments during the reception, Austin Powers and Ozzie Osbourne mingled among the guests breaking the ice and breaking jokes.

Then the following day? Enter Trump. In all his braggadocio glory, Trump roasted the lovely couple as well as all 40 of their dearest friends and relatives.

According to the party's host, John's impersonations were spot-on, hilarious, and unforgettable but most impressive was his ability to collaborate with the host to write material that addressed each and every guest at the table.

time finds John back in Philadelphia to shoot another video. This time, and apropos to Wawa's birthplace, as Benjamin Franklin. And this time to announce groundbreaking news that would leave the Sizzli as mere background noise.

In the new video produced for an internal audience... inventor and scientist, statesman, printer, philosopher, and entrepreneur, Ben Franklin ponders and embraces the changes and developments about to be unveiled.

Stay tuned for the news. Like the Sizzli, it's under wraps but when the time comes, a revolution in convenience stores will reveal itself.

John Adds A Little Miami Spice (as Dr. Phil) to the Magna Legal Services' 'Battle of the Experts' Program

Billed as the Showdown of South Beach, hundreds of attorneys and insurance representatives, users of Magna Legal Services -- gathered at the W South Beach hotel in Miami to participate in a two-day CLE program. A program which culminated in the Battle of the Experts: a live demonstration of a legal case using outside counsel, moderators and experts... including Dr. Phil. AKA Johnny D.

And in true form, Dr. Phil guided the discovery and arguments to a reasonable conclusion while adding a touch of levity to calm a heated and determined battle.

According to Peter Hecht, Founder and VP Sales, John absolutely closed the case for incorporating entertainment into serious subject matter. It's spicy, he said. It keeps things zesty and adds moments of much-needed comic relief to an intense exercise.

To that end, Peter has used John not only to add dimension to the Battle of the Experts, but to support over 250 webinars and to host his annual conferences over the last 10 years.
