John Intros and Participates in the Men's Panel at Loren Lahav's All-Women's Badass & Beautiful Conference

A Tony Robbins protege, Loren Lahav has grown into a powerhouse coach whose mission is to help women around the globe rediscover, recognize and own their unique value. The conference, held at the state-of-the-art Worre Studios in Las Vegas, wasn't just any event. It was an immersive experience for over 300 women live and thousands virtually.

And while this was a woman's conference, Lahav recognized that men play a pivotal role in supporting and uplifting the women in their lives. To that end, a remarkable panel of men was also featured during the conference ...

And none other than John was selected to introduce and participate in this all-important discussion.

A remarkable emcee, an improv performer at heart, a quick study and an independent business man, John is incredibly skilled at talking with folks extemporaneously or from a script and at creating an engaging, dynamic conversation that feels both natural and impactful.

His ability to think on his feet, connect with diverse perspectives, and steer meaningful discussions made him the perfect choice to intro and participate in this vital panel. With his signature blend of warmth, wit, and insight, John helped foster an open dialogue that underscored the importance of mutual support and collaboration. In a conference dedicated to transformation, his role was not just to participate but to elevate the conversation—ensuring that every voice, every perspective, and every takeaway resonated far beyond the event itself.

John Hosts National Speakers Association 'Last Story Standing' Competition

Who better to craft and tell stories than keynote speakers? And who better to host the competition but an event emcee and keynote speaker himself, Johnny D?

With that in mind, John was incredibly honored to stand before an audience of National Speaker Association Las Vegas chapter members and their guests.

And he was honored to not only introduce eight incredible storytellers, each of whom told moving, funny, serious and insightful stories, but he was honored to perform interstitial stories himself using his comedic talents and impressions to wow a super welcoming and enthusiastic crowd.

According to Marilyn Sherman,
Keynote Speaker and Meeting Attendee ...

John, you did such a fabulous job!
You kept the day moving and you were hilarious at the same time.
Your impressions were spot on!

We were very lucky to have you emcee the event.
Bravo!

John Co-Hosts
16th Annual St Baldrick's Day Event and the Attendees Go Bald

(say what?)

For well over a decade, John Katsilometes, head entertainment writer for the Las Vegas Review Journal, JJ Snyder, Las Vegas TV personality and media consultant and Jason Fineberg, Fox News anchor, have been dedicated to managing and hosting the St. Baldrick's Foundation's annual head-shaving event in Las Vegas... a charitable event which aims to raise funds for childhood cancer research.

In March, the 16th annual event was held at New York-New York Hotel & Casino's Brooklyn Bridge and featured various celebrities and performers who volunteered as head-shavers. It was their contribution to the community's efforts in supporting this vital cause.

Johnny D was there. And obviously, John didn't need his head shaved so instead, he actually cheered on the headshavers and volunteers and his enthusiasm and support brought in a right few quids, as the Irish might say! There was a wee bit of a party too (hundreds attended) and a grand time was had by one and all. Cheers to St. Baldrick's!

And the Characters, of Course, are Never Far Behind

Ben Franklin and Jay Leno Participate in the MAGNA Legal Services March Madness Meeting

MAGNA Legal Services is an end-to-end litigation support service for law firms, corporations, and governmental agencies nationwide. And each year, MAGNA hosts a CLE conference for approximately 150 attendees representing law firms nationwide. This year the conference was held in Las Vegas.

MAGNA used the forum to create a little March Madness by entertaining (and educating) the attendees in serious and not-so serious sessions. Case in point.

Ben and Jay sitting in the mock jury pool for MAGNA Legal Services Meeting

Each year, there's an opportunity for attendees to hone their skills and earn their CLE credits. To that end, jury selection is a critical step in the process of hearing a case. And MAGNA works on serious but fun exercises to finetune those talents.

This time around, a bunch of everyday folks were placed in the jury pool and they were sitting right alongside Benjamin Franklin.

Say what?

Well, seems Franklin was resurrected to play a potential juror due to his knowledge of contracts. Take for instance the Declaration of Independence. Remember that? Big contract.

And what's the biggest contractual case out there now? Well, it's the Hollywood story of Blake Lively vs. Justin Baldoni. And that was the case up for grabs in this exercise. Prosecutors loved Ben. Defense? Not so much. But Ben was selected.

Jay Leno was there too and was selected to be part of another jury and case. And Donald Trump closed out the meeting with bombastic claims on just about everything.

At the end of the day, John closed out all of the sessions with a full run-down of all of his impressions. The content was all MAGNA and legal related. And the audience loved it.

Using characters to illustrate points is brilliant. Everyone watching was there to learn; and they were riveted. Boring is not in MAGNA's vocabulary. Humor was intentionally and interstitially deployed throughout the meeting to keep the participants and observers of the case engaged and entertained.

More on MAGNA

Guy Fieri Cooks Up a Great Webinar for MAGNA Legal Services

No one wants to speak of Covid anymore, but it was good for something. The birth of virtual meetings. And MAGNA did not miss a beat and continues to use virtual with great success.

On a quarterly basis, hundreds of legal professionals gather round their screens for

Peter Hecht, Founding Partner and EVP Sales with Ben Franklin after the Voire Dire

the MAGNA Webinar series and MAGNA always adds a big scoop of interaction and entertainment and with that succeeds in garnering very high participation rates. This time, 300 participants engaged.

And this time Guy Fieri, aka Johnny D, cooked up some rich content and tons of fun. And it started with a virtual red carpet entrance of MAGNA fan-favorite reps and ended with a pot of gold. A $1500 jackpot.

According to Peter Hecht, MAGNA Founding Partner, sign-ups for the next webinar are through the roof because what MAGNA is offering is critical to their day-to-day work, and plainly speaking, they attend because the webinars are designed to be fun. And given John's diversity, he can be almost anyone MAGNA wants him to be, so the surprise element is intriguing and always there.
