Meeting and Event Emcee
Brings Multiple Personalities to Corporate Shows and Crushes It

Meeting and event professionals are always looking for options to infuse excitement and enthusiasm into their meetings. And to make the meetings memorable. And there are a million ways to Sunday to get that job done.

super-professional, stand-alone emcee to the wacky walk-about characters, John's got it all. As a writer, John can help develop creative solutions in collaboration with clients that will weave comedy and content seamlessly together. And with a background in acting and improv, John can play most any role from corporate host, interviewer and facilitator to product authoritarian while always bringing funny to the forefront.

Event Emcee

Walk-About Character

But there's only one Johnny D who can do all of that while putting stars in the eyes of the audience. Literally and figuratively. And there's nothing like a spellbound audience. And the impact of a mega influencer.

In a single meeting, John's parade of character actors can work as emcee, awards show host, team builder, game show host or brand ambassador.

And, what's more, according to John, it's his thing. "I love hosting multi-day programs. I get to be the connective tissue of the meeting, playing specifically chosen characters for specific segments."

Producers and Clients Love Him

John's clients love it equally as well. According to Mike Stone, CEO of CertaPro Painters,

"John transformed himself and an ordinary room into a vital stage for comedy, fun and learning over four days."

And Red Roof President, George Limbert recently stated that,

"John is an incredible actor and plays many different roles. He was phenomenal at our 2023 Conference! He was funny, smart, thoughtful and brought it everyday! From the development of conference concepts to enhancing the scripts, he proved invaluable."

And They Love the Deal

And for event specialists looking to get more bang for the buck, while securing invaluable results, this is it. John's rate is for one but he can deliver in multiples.

Corporate planners think of it as a two-for, a three-for, or even a four-for. According to Jack Rickenbach, Owner, Aranco Productions, "it's unprecedented and brings extraordinary value to any event."

GOING IN AND OUT OF CHARACTER TO SUIT

John Takes A Bare-Faced Approach and Goes Solo as Professional Host

In Honor of

Presidents Day, Stern Invites Trump (and Obama), On Air for a Debate

Not every event needs a character; but most all events need character. A backbone. An element that keeps the event tight and contiguous. And often that element comes in the form of a strong, solid professional host with lots of sparkle and personality that can set the tone, keep things going and going in the right direction. John, bare-faced and without the wardrobes, does a solid solo.

He's got the chops and the experience to build event equity, engagement and impact. As a decades-long artist, writer and an actor for business clients, John has a clear understanding of what's funny, what's appropriate and what works in the corporate world.

His sensitivity to culture, value and company mission is well-honed. His ability to craft custom content is exceptional; and his newly-minted, unguarded stage presence is just so damn charismatic.

Best known for his controversial broadcasts, Howard Stern has conducted the most brilliant celebrity interviews ever heard. Candid and sometimes combative, Howard is not afraid to ask the tough questions.

And for 3 years, with over 30 appearances, Stern has challenged Trump, aka John Di Domenico, with some of the toughest questions.

This time though, Stern pitted Trump (Johnny D) against Obama (Ben Campbell) and mayhem followed.

Boisterous claims from Trump of being the best president ever were followed by more contained comebacks from Obama. And what started out almost civil exploded in a riotous comedic rumble that Stern had to finally put to an end. What a fun way to celebrate President's Day!

The interview can be heard on the SiriusXM Howard Stern radio archives.
